Joshua country

Joshua tree belongs to the same family as the mim. They are both ~~lily~~ and the lily is the Smith family of the plant world. In this lily family, there is a genus known as the yucca! And the yucca also takes a variety of forms, probably the degeneration of the Spanish bayonet. But out of these yuccas, found in all conditions & part of the Southwest desert greatly to its liking and became a sirable tree: a green sort of plant with curly arms crooked at the elbow, and so unsymmetrical that it looks as though it were constantly asking itself the question: "What shall I do next?" - Some of these Joshua are nearly 40 feet high.

The name was given to this giant yucca by the Mormons, who saw in its extended arms a symbol pointing to the promised land they were seeking. It may be so but the promised land must have been pointing in all points of the compass, for the Joshua tree points everywhere, including up and down. Though the tree itself may be nothing of beauty, when blooming time comes it sends forth a cluster of creamy-white blossoms a foot long at the very ends of its branches.
